COMPREHENSION PASSAGE

Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

One day, when Raki was six, he walked home from the Mussoorie bazaar eating cherries. They were a little sweet, a little sour. They were small bright red cherries, all the way from the valley of Kashmir. By the time Raki reached his Grandfather's cottage, there were three cherries left. "Have a cherry, Dada," he said to his Grandfather in the garden. Grandfather took a cherry and Raki promptly ate the other two. He kept the last cherry stone in his mouth for a long time, rolling it on his tongue until the tang had gone. Then, he placed the stone on the palm of his hand and studied it.

"Are cherry stones lucky?" he asked.

"Of course," said Grandfather.

"Then I'll keep it."

"Nothing is lucky if you put it away. You must make it work for you."

"What can I do with a cherry stone?"

"Plant it!"

Raki went to a corner of the garden where the earth was soft and yielding and pressed the seed into the soil with his thumb. It went right in.
